Commissioner Burgess Sworn In For Six-Year Term

ATLANTA – Public Service Commissioner David Burgess took the oath of office today to begin a full six-year term on the Commission, which regulates Georgia’s electric, telephone and natural gas utilities. Governor Roy Barnes administered the oath of office as family, friends and co-workers looked on. Burgess was elected to serve a full six-year term in November with more than 52 percent of the vote statewide. He was first appointed to fill a vacant seat on April 8, 1999.
